I did grand jury last summer for 2 months. It was 1 day a week. So not bad. I liked it.

I find it to be oppressively boring, and I am not interested in spending hours and days listening to some one telling me what do etc.
 I've served twice, been called 11 times.
 Two were canceled, and one, I ended up in the hospital.
 After the second time serving, I was done...
 If I have to show up, I let them know that I am a member of the "Fully Informed Jury Association" (FIJA), and I'm immediately excused.
 Judges and prosecutors will do and say anything, to avoid the possibility of a jury nullifying a law (Jury Nullification).
 Yep, a jury is not only evaluating the case of the accused, it is also evaluating the laws those charges stem from.

I didn't mind it but I wasn't selected...the one I went to in Ohio had to deal with 5/3 bank and I banked there so I couldn't be picked and since I'm a single mom in TN and have no one to watch my son, I got out of it. I'd love to do it one day though

I hate jury duty. I'm not getting paid basically 6 bucks a day to sit in a musty ass waiting room until I get called. Fuck that. I get out every time. I've been called in 6 times since I was 18.

What a great learning experience jury duty has given me.
I'm not sure why everyone hates it..I think it's the bees knees. Lol!! However, I am mentally drained!!!

I think it's more about if you get paid during that time.....I would do it anytime in the summer. I've just get called right at the beginning of the school year when just getting settled

I'm way too impatient (immature?) to deal with all of that...
It took me two times, to understand that about myself.
